GOP Appoints McCann To State Committee

Lynchburg attorney Frank W. McCann, a native of Appomattox county, has been named to the Republican State Central Committee.

McCann resigned his position as contract analyst for Babcock and Wilcox Co. Saturday, April 27, and said he plans to open a private law office in Lynchburg.

State GOP leaders, meeting on April 27 in Charlottesville, appointed him to assist in the establishment of precinct organizations throughout the state.

McCann was nominated by Horace E. Henderson, state Republican Party chairman. Henderson warmly endorsed McCann who is now serving as chairman of the Virginia Young Republican Federation. McCann recently lost a bid for election as chairman of the Federation.

McCann has indicated that special efforts will be made in the Second, Third, Sixth, Seventh and Tenth districts of the state. He said he feels these areas will provide the GOP with the best opportunity of electing members to the General Assembly.

McCann is a former assistant U. S. Attorney for the Western District of Virginia. He is a member of the Lynchburg Republican Committee.

It has been speculated that McCann might be interested in carrying the GOP banner in the Lynchburg - Campbell County state senate race. Another possible GOP candidate in that race is Robert S. Burruss, lumber company executive. Burruss when asked about reports that he has been approached to run for the past, said that he had "no comment."

The deadline for filing for the GOP is July 16 — a week after the Democrats pick their candidates in the July 9 primary.

Wheat Farmers Are Urged To Sign Up For Referendum

Deadline To Register For Vote, May 13

The success of the Kennedy administration's campaign for a new wheat control plan—already a point of intense controversy among agricultural interest groups—appears to hinge on the attitude small growers will exhibit through their ballots on May 21.

On that date, for the first time in 10 years, farmers with less than 15 acres of wheat land will be able to cast votes in a national wheat marketing referendum.

In terms of Virginia's agriculture this means that more than 40,000 of the state's 45,000 wheat growers can go to the ballot box, according to the Appomattox headquarters of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Registration Rule

Under the referendum's provisions, the small grower must by May 13 indicate, through registration with the ASCS, his participation as an allotment grower to be eligible to vote.

Those small farmers who elect not to take part will be able to grow wheat on up to 15 acres without being subject to marketing quota penalties.

But, in addition to forfeiting their vote, they will not receive federal price support, and will not earn diversion payments.

Since the introduction of the proposed plan, agricultural interest groups across the nation have been trying to influence the farmers' vote in various forms.

Farm Bureau Speaks

The Appomattox County Farm Bureau urges all wheat growers to register at the ASC Office so they will be eligible to vote. To be eligible the grower must sign the green copy mailed out by the ASC office and have their copy in the office by May 13. This program will change the future of the wheat program. Farm Bureau urges all growers to study the issues involved and vote.

Waller E. Henry, Spout Spring, is Appomattox County president of the Farm Bureau. Said Henry on Tuesday, "We recommend that farmers vote 'No.' There IS no surplus of soft red wheat (this is the type grown in Virginia). Virginia grows only one-fourth of the wheat it consumes, and has constantly been reducing its acreage for one reason or another. If this bill pa ... we shall become a state of 'small farmers' only."

"Basically," he added, "we oppose this program because it takes away from the farmer his right to decide what he grows on the farm."

From Va. Farmers Union

Jack Hall, president of Virginia Farmers Union, said in a press release to the TIMES Tuesday:

"If farmers vote for the program they will not be committing themselves to it for all time to come, but only for the 1964 wheat crop. If the program proved in practice to be as bad as the Farm Bureau says it is, surely this would be apparent to farmers and they could reject the program in the next vote. The Congress could then change it. What farmers are voting for in this referendum is not a new direction for all farm programs as the Farm Bureau says, but a trial of a new plan for wheat.

"It seems not unreasonable that the government asks farmers to cooperate in limiting production if they want a guaranteed price for their products. If they don't want to comply with acreage allotments in return for a higher price, well that settles of government management of farms, nor is it setting the course of farm policy evermore.

"The Virginia Farmers Union believes it to be in the best interest of Virginia farmers to vote 'yes' in this referendum and is so advising its members," Mr. Hall concluded.

TV Every Day Planned For Next Year

Superintendent Earl Smith announced Friday that educational television would be seen every day of the school year, beginning with the September term. This year 7th and 8th graders' science classes were supplemented by TV instruction each Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. Next year the TV science supplement will be for sixth and seventh grade, with sixth graders being taught Monday and Wednesday of each week, and seventh graders, Tuesday and Thursday. Each Friday, Smith says, either music or art on the 4th, 5th, or 6th grade level will be taught. Art and music were given a trial run in February with three programs on music and three on art given during a three week period. James Earl, of Lynchburg, science teacher for this year will probably continue the science instruction, said Smith, with details on the teaching for music and art still to be decided.

Lynchburg's Channel 13 — WLVA — presents the program from 9:30 to 10 a.m. At present Lynchburg, Campbell County Appomattox, Amherst, and Bedford Counties all contribute to financial support and planning for educational TV.

First Jump

Mrs. Henry A. White, mother of 5 and wife of Appomattox's policeman, made her first parachute jump Sunday at Clover, Va. The jump was made at 2,000 feet. A sudden shift of wind caused Mrs. White to miss target area slightly. She landed about two feet off the ground in a small tree, but was unhurt. The first jump was so successful she says she wants to do it again. Of the nine or ten parachutists who jump regularly at Clover, Mrs. White is the only woman. Policeman Henry White, when asked how he feels about jumping, said that he plans to stick to flying! He isn't an ecthusiastic about trying it as his wife; says he'll wait until he "has to" to bail out into the blue.

Garment Co. Plans New Plant To Trinidad

Fred H. Lawson, president of the Appomattox Garment Company, and Vernon T. Bryant, manager of the Altavista plant, left Tuesday by Jet plane for Trinidad for the purpose of setting up a plant in this small island in the West Indies. Lawson plans to return home this week end and Bryant will remain there for three weeks to supervise the setting up and operation of the plant.

Patricia Ann, Inc., a division of G. H. & E. Freydberg, in New York City, has entered in agreement with a group in Trinidad to allow them to make Patricia Ann Dresses, to be sold only in Trinidad.

The plant will have approximately 25 machines and will produce around 300 dozen dresses per week. They plan to also make knit items, such as polo shirts, suits and pants.

Miss Zeno Zolla Gomez, a Trinidad native, will supervise the plant. Miss Gomez visited the Appomattox plant recently to observe operations.

Trinidad is a small island a few miles off the coast of Venezuela in South America. Trinidad, Port of Spain, is referred to as a part of the West Indies. The West Indies is made up of hundreds of islands, extending in a sweeping arc, beginning near Southern Florida and ending off the coast of Venzuela. Trinidad has a small population and the climate is warm the year round.
